Realtime Reporting

Realtime court reporting is now a standard in litigation. Southern District Reporters offer realtime reporting in every courtroom.

To access realtime reporting of a proceeding, a laptop computer is interfaced to a court reporter's stenotype machine. Transcripts of the proceedings appear on the screen in realtime—that is, you see the words as they are spoken. Ordering parties may use their own laptop or one furnished by SDR.

Realtime reporting gives a litigator the advantage of:

Annotating the transcript as the case proceeds.

Better preparation for cross-examination through review of testimony.

Keyword searches

Min-U-Script

Southern District Reporters uses Min-U-Script technology for condensing and indexing transcripts. Min-U-Script's index of all significant words in the transcript helps a litigating team to easily locate specific testimony. Four pages of standard text is condensed onto one easily readable page.
